When writing short stories there is always a need to catch the reader's attention with the first sentence. The aim of this booklet is to provide an opening on which you can build a story. The opening lines in this booklet can be used in different ways to suit different types of story.

When writing short stories try and think 'outside the box' as the saying goes.

There are one hundred opening lines to wet your imagination and I'm sure from this selection you will be able to come up with some gripping tales. Spend a little time thinking about each situation and how a story could be composed from these openers. Take the sentence of your choice and write it down on a blank sheet of paper. You can then start to 'mind map' on this blank sheet all the ideas that appear in your head. Put down anything that may be relevant. Once you have enough material you are ready to begin. I have written numerous short stories using this technique. Don't forget, people love short stories and they are an ideal way to start a publishing enterprise on kindle.

Best wishes
