The Old Man and a Boy John Anderson

Should your son die in your arms would you not pray for comfort and gather needed strength from your faith. But some men in their anguish and loss, turn their back on their faith. Their bible gathers dust and life becomes a burden. That such a lost soul would turn his bitterness towards a boy, whose faith has never been questioned, let alone be told there is no God.

How this young boy overcomes his doubt when confronted by such a bitter man and uses his faith and love to bring back that man from the darkness of despair to be born again. Was it the hand of God or a coincidence that their paths should cross? This story is a must read for the faithful and unfaithful.
