Have you ever felt hopeless, feeling that the jig was up and your circumstances were too bleak to ever improve? No matter what your fears, there is no bottomless pit. There is a bottom and there is also hope. Always. What do the story of an unwanted horse and the promise of a mansion in heaven have in common? Both prove that hope rests on a firm foundation - even when you can't see it. God sent us to find two horses - by name - almost nine years after we'd sold them as youngsters. We didn't need any more horses and I didn't know where these two were. But when God tells you to do something the best course of action is to get busy. Shiner and Ace were hopeless. They had given up. They needed to be rescued and time was running out. They must have felt the same way Black Beauty did, waiting at the auction for the end to come. Black Beauty was rescued and found his way home, never to be sold again. So did Shiner and Ace. Black Beauty is a pretend horse, but Shiner and Ace are brothers, real horses born a week apart and never separated. Would you like to hear Shiner's side of the story? Let him tell you what it's like to discover that deliverance will come when God knows your name. He promised. The promise is true.
