In Volume 1, E. H. Carr begins with an analysis of the events in Russian history from 1898 to 1917 that shaped the course of the Revolution. He examines the constitutional structure erected by the new government and then turns to the multifarious problems facing the Bolsheviks as they took possession of a rapidly disintegrating Russian empire. In Volume 2, Discusses the economic policies and predicaments of the Soviet regime. it shows how the belated attempts to end the revolutionary chaos in agriculture and industry were interrupted by the civil war. In Volume 3 Analyses the difficulties of soviet foreign policy. These were due partly to Russia's geographical position as both a European and Asian power, and partly to the conflict between an attempt to promote world revolution on the one hand and a desire to establish normal diplomatic relations with capitalist governments on the other.
